Heart Troubles

The heart may be weak just the same as the eyes. stomach or other organs. It often happens that a person is born with a weak heart. Then again disease, fevers, over-exertion, anxiety, nervousness, rheumatism, etc. weaken the heart. The result is shortness of breath, palpitation, pain in the heart, or in some of the nerves of the chest or abdomen. The heart should be strengthened with a tonic. and for this nothing equals

START IN DETROIT.

New York, March 5.—The start of the next annual tour of the American Automobile association will probably be made in Detroit A resolution to this end has been adopted at an executive committee meeting of the National Association of Automble Mannfacturers. The preference for Detroit as a starting point is expressed because of the many factories of automobiles there, and it was pointed out that there would be at least a dozen entries from that city alone.

DONLIN AND SEYMOUR EASY, BIKE RIDER IS

In Final Contest Southpaw Covaleski Had Left Handed Batsman Fooled Completely-As to Gameness.

To what extent should a ball player's gameness be tempered with common sense?

If a star left-hand hitter, due to face a manager that it would be a wise more to send a right-hand hitter up to his place. would that show a disposition to quit in the make up of the left-hand batsman in iskey and McGraw say they don't care to hear top-notch hitters confess to a weakpaw flinging. But Joe Cantillon takes the Giants would have won the last National league pennant if McGraw had listened to Mike Donlin in the ninth inning of the final game with Philadelphia—that important game which Covaleski twirled and won.

LAST TOUGH GAME.

"In spite of Merkle's failure to touch second in the game of Sept. 23, with the Cubs," said Cantinon, New York probably would have won the bennant had Donlin's tip to McGraw in the last game with the Phillies been acted upon. The game referred to was played in Philadelphia Oct. 8. The Washingtons were in New York and I met Donlin that night about 8:20, he having hurried back from Philadelphia. We had dinner to gether and he told me of losing the toughest game ever played.

"Most of the fans who followed the games of the leading teams right up to the finish of the race will never farget the details of that content it was New York's eighth game of that week against the Phillies. Covaleski, the new lefthand wonder, was pitching against Mathewson. Twice before during the week Covaleski had triumphed over New York, but it looked as though the Glants would be able to land the pennant all right if they could grab that find battle. So Mathewson was sent in against the southpaw.

DONLIN WAS EASY.

DONAIN WAS BASY.

"Matty had been retleved by Wiltse when it came to the beginning of the ninth and the Phillies were leading, 3 to 1. Well, Herzeg was the first man up and he scored on a hit, fumble and McCormick's triple. That rooked like a tie score surely. Donlin, the best man on the New York club, mind you, was next to bat. But Covaleski's left-hand curves had been too much for Mike in every game that week, and he said to McGraw:

"Mac, this fellow has got it on me; you'd better send a right-hander up in my place."

you'd better send a right-hander up to my place."

"McGraw wouldn't do it. I would look fine, the manager said, sending a substitute hitter up for you."

"'All right,' said Mike, and he went to bat and popped up a little fly—just what he had been doing all the week against the new left-hander.

"Of course, Donlin's reputation as a game player was established too long ago for anyone to say now that he weak-ened in that emergency. It was just a case of too much pitcher with the left-handed curve.
